HUNDRED LOSE LIVES IN HUN RAID ON PARIS

Paris, March 13. The German air raid over Paris on Monday night took a heavier toll of hu-man life than at first believed. Twentyman life than at first believed. Germany's resumption of the use of spelins for raids on Great Britain is a first acknowledgment Von Hinden-org has permitted of the constantly creasing superiority of the Allies in Increasing superiority of the Allies in airnlanes.

The usefulness of Zeppelins as raiders has long been an exploded myth. Their comparatively low speed and vulnerability have made them more costly to send on haby-killing expeditions than the value of the material damage they have inflicted. Nevertheless, the Kaiser's megalomaniac belief that the Allies' morale can be lowered by air raids apparently has caused imperative orders that the bombing of Great Britain continue, whatever the risks.

Von Hindenburg has not enough airplanes at his disposal to keep up the necessary aeronautical duties along the west front and at the same time conduct air offensives against Paris and London. He has been compelled, therefore, to go back to the antionated Zeppelins for the renewal of his attacks you monocombatants in the British isles. Von Hindenburg's passion for efficiency in all matters of slaughter would not permit him to use the less destructive type of air madding unless it were absolutely necessary.

The only development that could ex-cuse Von Hindenburg inefficiency of this character would be the gradual establishment by the Allies of control of the air along the west front. Von Hindenburg, in fact, can no longer re-move many of his airplanes from the battle lines.

America's participation in this vital actor in the war is becoming increasing felt. For the next offensive the selt of America's aviators may even be ufficient to blind the German general taff by clearing the air of the Hunnachines. That is the aeronautical ideal hich the Allies are striving to reach on Hindenburg's use of Zeppelins to aid Great Britain shows he is uneasy to the prospect.
